

IMPS Contacts - Brief Specification

1 Purpose

Legislation affecting information and information services and technology is growing in its extent and complexity. The risks of failing to comply, together with the potential consequences of any such failings, are also increasing. All areas of the University need to be aware and able to recognise and respond rapidly to information requests, with the Freedom of information Act (FOIA) allowing just 20 days to answer them. Information legislation, and the Government's agenda expressed in other ways, also have consequences for record keeping and management. In order to meet the University needs and to manage risks in this area, we need to ensure awareness of the law in this area, and of University policy to comply with the law, is raised, and that adequate support is also available.

As reported to ISC in No N ADs, (ADs, hU) (b) iAiMs, (PS) 4 (55U) 34 MCID 8 (16D 81D 8EID DC -M 30.t) (6) 4 Protection Office and work on coordinating Information Strategy." As such, IMPS provides both training and publicity, and support services, especially in relation to the Data Protection (DPA), Freedom of Information (FOIA) Acts, and records management. For this activity to be effective we have developed a network of IMPS Contacts across directorates and schools, through whom we can cascade information, knowledge, training and support. All schools and directorates will have to handle work in this area. The IMPS Contacts provide a supported and informed network of administrative staff, able to manage and direct queries and enquiries relating to the Freedom of Information Act, the Data Protection Act and any other relevant information-related legislation. Also they are able to contribute to records management policy development and implementation.

2 Resource

The variation of demand created by individual DPA and FOIA enquiries makes it difficult to assess the time this role may require. However, many information requests will already be routinely handled across the University and where the legislation increases our obligations, the aim is to ensure the support, network and expertise are in place so as to minimise the consequent demands upon individual schools and directorates.

IMPS will also provide an on-going review of the consequences of these acts so as to develop services and contribute to University policy which will aim to ensure efficiency in meeting our legal obligations, and which may also increase business efficiency, especially in respect of records management.
